Queer Figures In the News Dispatches

STEFEN STAN, a mine worker of Los Angeles, Cal., has made a bet of $25,000 that he can walk from that city around the world. He hopes to beat Weston's record about five times over. He had got as far as Vienna, Austria, when the accompanying snapshot of him was taken. As will be seen, he travels with very little baggage, a walking stick and heavy boots being his main dependence in travel. He has his arm in a sling from an accident en route.

Mrs. H. C. Schneider of St. Louis is a woman who thinks that Mr. Weston should not have it all his own way, and she proposes to show him that there are some good pedestrians among the fair sex. She recently started out to walk from St. Louis to Boston on a wager and is traveling at times both day and night, with only occasionally a few hours' sleep.

Mrs. Schneider is accompanied by her husband, who carries a suit case containing their change of clothing. The woman pedestrian is being met by crowds in every town through which they pass, the demonstration in some places even exceeding those accorded to Weston.

Mrs. Schneider expects to reach Boston in forty-five days. From there she has tentatively planned to walk to New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington. Mrs. Schneider has a local reputation as a pedestrian, but has never attempted so long a walk before.

MRS. H. C. SCHNEIDER.

In Edwin A. Brown, a Colorado millionaire, the tramps of this country have a friend and champion who proposes to make life easier for them, if such a thing is possible. Mr. Brown isn't going to poison all the farmers' dogs or provide free drinks for the hoboes, however. He intends to do a little quiet investigating for their good and will throw the limelight on the various homes and lodging places where tramps are supposed to be able to get a bed and breakfast in return for woodchopping or other work.

Brown will wear the jumper costume in which he is shown in the photograph and in this trampish rig will apply for admission to some one of the homes for the homeless. Then he will tell the public how he was received and what the thinks of the system. He is going from city to city on his mission on behalf of the hobo and says he intends to devote his life to the cause of the "down and out" contingent.

A ROYAL DEBUT.

The Coming Out of Princess Victoria Louise of Germany.

A young woman not quite seventeen is about to be the principal figure in a social event that will bring together as guests many of the notables of Europe and diplomatic representatives from every country of the world. The occasion will be the "coming out" ball in September of Princess Victoria Louise of Germany, whose childhood days are at an end and who must now begin housekeeping on her own account.

In Germany it is the idea that the daughter of royalty should train early for the duties the life of the wife of a ruler imposes, and immediately after her debut she will reside in a palace of her own near Potsdam, where she will be initiated into the mysteries of presiding over an estate. This suburb home, however, will only be a place of preparation, for just as soon as she demonstrates that she can discharge its affairs with economy and system she will be put in charge of a still more pretentious palace and carried along until she is competent to preside over any home of royalty to which her destiny may carry her.

The "little princess," as she is called by the people of Germany, was born Sept. 13, 1892, and is the emperor's only daughter. Being the only girl among so many boys, she has, of course, been the idol of the family and a great pet of her father. It is said that the kaiser's favorite picture of himself is that in which his daughter is shown sitting on his knee. Although not a great beauty, the princess is a fairly good looking girl, with kindly, winning ways and absolutely devoid of vanity. She is highly educated, well versed in the arts of the household, like her mother, and not without interest in things philanthropic.

Any royal family in Europe would welcome the idea of a union with the family of one of the most powerful of modern rulers, and from the time she takes her place in the arena of world politics the Princess Victoria Louise will never be out of the limelight.

To Save Horses from Fire.

When a horse is released from his stall during a fire, says a technical paper, he will not leave the stable, for the stall is the only place in which he believes himself to be safe. A new patented device, which consists of a pipe running through the stall to the outside of the stable, is designed to cure this. In case of fire a turn of a handle brings a hose nozzle into position and a stream of water pours over the head and shoulders of the horse, which drives him into the gangway, from which it becomes a comparatively easy matter to lead him into the street.

When Lent Commenced.

Lent is said to have been instituted by Pope Telephorus. In early days Lent commenced on Sunday, now known as the first Sunday in Lent, but in 487 the four days preceding were added by Pope Felix III. (483-526), thus increasing the number of fast days to 40. It was first observed in England in 840. Previous to 1543 the use of meat was prohibited during this season, but in that year Henry VII. (1509-1547) of England issued a proclamation permitting the use of white meat. The use of meat was wholly forbidden by James I. and again by Charles I.
